

The life of a public man is often arduous and demanding, difficult and sometimes it is perilous. It is a great satisfaction to know that our friend has been serving his country and public life. All differences of opinion are resolved not only now, but when we last met, when he was here, it was suggested. So we hear his remains tenderly away from their last resting place. He will be missed by this city that he loved so well by those to whom as a physician he brought healing and by those to whom as a statesman he served. Let us pray for him and for the people who will soon miss him. Truly these words belong to me as one. "Well done! Good and faithful servant, thou didst merit the joy my Lord."

When on my day of life the night is falling:

And in the winds from unmeasured spaces blown
I hear far voices of darkness calling
My feet at paths unknown,

Then when I made my home of life

Leave not its warmth when its flame decay.

Oh Love Divine, oh Helper ever-re-

Be thou my strength and stay,

Be near me when all else is from me

writing,

Earth's sky, home's pictures, days

of love and shrewdness,

And kindly faces to my own uplifting

The love which gives me mine.

I have but Thee, my Father, let thy spirit

Be with me then to comfort and

reassure,

No gate of pearl, no branch of palm

I merit,

No coat of shining gold.

Suffice if my good and ill unrec-

onced,

And both through thy un-

bounding grace,

I find refuge by hands familiar beckoned.

Unto my fitting places,

Some humble door among thy many

some sheltering shade where sin

and striving cease,

And flows forever through Heaven's

green expansions,

The life for which I long.

Mr. Miller concluded his address with a fervent prayer and then the climax of "Nearer My God to Thee," was rendered with such fervor and enthusiasm by the organist, Miss McHardy, seated played, "God be With You." All differences of opinion were resolved not only now, but when we last met, when he was here, it was suggested. So we hear his remains tenderly away from their last resting place. He will be missed by this city that he loved so well by those to whom as a physician he brought healing and by those to whom as a statesman he served. Let us pray for him and for the people who will soon miss him. Truly these words belong to me as one. "Well done! Good and faithful servant, thou didst merit the joy my Lord."

STRATHCONA NEWS

LOCALS

The identity of the unknown man found in the bear car in Strathcona on July 5th has at last been discovered. He is a Shetland Islander, James Keay, who was captured on the C.P.R. extra gang and was a friend of Mr. Fowles, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Mr. Fowles has identified the articles of the deceased.

The Strathcona fire brigade stand ready to meet any emergency. The electric storm of Thursday night Friday morning resulted in thirty of the houses being damaged. The fire department to the rescue, and the damage was reported.

The city forces have recommended the services of a chief of the fire department to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. H. Gibson.

Mr. Gibson, who is receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter, took place on July 10. Mr. Hodder was taken back to Strathcona yesterday by Capt. Sergt. Nutt to answer to a charge of false pretences which had been preferred against him. According to the advice received, at the local police station, Hodder, who very recently had applied for a position in Strathcona for some time, but had there after issued a check for which he had no money, was arrested as a prisoner was arrested as he stepped off the train, on a description identical with that given by Hodder.

The young man was brought to Strathcona and his damages were assessed at paying all expenses.

NEW PRINCIPAL APPOINTED. At a special meeting of the Strathcona school board held last night

He is a native of Alberta, Scotland, and has taught in schools in Strathcona, Liberal association, Strathcona, city council, Strathcona, chamber of trade, Knights of Pythias and others.

AUTHORESS IN CITY. To meet the present economic opportunity, to study the process of assimilation of incoming settlers and to help them to adjust themselves to the new life in the north, the author of "Jean Blewett, the former known actress, is making through Western Canada.

"I am not in a work-day mood at all," said the authoress to a British reporter when she arrived at the King Edward hotel. "I left Toronto several weeks ago and have had time to acquire most of the enthusiasm of the Canadian people and material for some literary work which will have a western setting. Hitlerism is the main theme of my work, confined to depicting life and scenes principally in Ontario. I now feel

CURRENT COMMENT.

Commenting on the Nova Scotian coal mine strike the Montreal Gazette says aptly: "It is not a fight between 'two lions' but it is a fight for the most important thing that gives birth to 'Union' a right to exist—the right to make a bargain, its members will 'not repudiate.'"

As we to be supposed, Dhuara, the assassin of Sir Curzon Wyllie rewards himself as a patriot and thinks the judge for honoring him with the opportunity to die for India. Wild as the man's views are they are probably the views of thousands of Dhuara's countrymen who are not thinking but reasoning as to the future of things in that section of the Empire. The execution of the murderer will likely deepen the conviction of his sympathizers that Britain is a tyrant and that Indians are victims. For an outbreak of assassinations seems quite willing to be "martyred" for their crimes may easily be the result.

Our ball team are stand-patters.

Says the Calgary Albertan: "There is hardly in store for the prize fighter in the province of Alberta, and this is pretty much of a closed territory to him. There was a time when Calgary was a great place for sports and entertainment, and now Calgary has been closed for the time being. Then the pugs made journeys up to Carstairs, but Carstairs did not seem to relish the game. Then Gleichen was selected, and Gleichen is a closed district the year round. Then they turned to Banff, but Banff will be closed before it is really opened. Edmonton is working on the principle that what was too risky for Calgary is not safe for Edmonton. The city has also closed the lid down somewhat. Letbridge comes about the only oasis for the prize fighter, and it is only a matter of time before that city will be closed. While some things can be said in favor of the boxer, he is not a good sport or an entomologist, on the other hand it must be admitted that it is a very difficult sport to handle. It brings in the wake the most undesirable and depraved, and generally creates a condition of affairs that should not be welcomed."

(Montreal Witness)—The constitutional revolution has been accomplished in Persia with the help of bloodshed, and apparently the help of incendiary Shah, who could neither do one thing or another, has dethroned himself by flight, and his son, a child of twelve, has been proclaimed in his place, under, we may suppose, competent tutelage. Who unto the Shah, who is the last of the Shahs, and who is the first of the Shahs? The point of fact that the child has been de-throned and the present regent may be presumed to be a man of more than ordinary ability, however. In any case, the new Shah, if in a royal court, is out of place, constituting a government with which it has been so long at war. Nevertheless, it is General Linakin, the Shah's commander of the Shah's forces, who negotiated the surrender of those forces, and who is now in command under the Nationalist regime. Had he not succeeded? Russia would in far greater esteem than his own could, at best, have looked forward to a commuted death sentence. But for his "negotiations" with the rebels, there seems to be no word of rebuke. The Shah, who is the Russian ambassador, is being nursed at the British embassy. The sympathy of the British legation is to be pronounced. His Britannic warning and counsel to his people to remain quiet and at Taboran will affect her relations with India, we can only await with concern to know.

ADVENTURES IN THE FAR NORTH.

The call of the Northland reaches far and wide. It is a net that gathers all who are bold enough to fall into its meshes, a snare to sucker to the north, a sleepless, brainless sucker to the south. The gullies, glacial lake trout. And so the Northland has drawn in many men from the court down to the cabin minister, or to revert to a more modern comparison, from the cabinet minister to the town pump, a connoisseur of which I cannot see the point, because all town pumps are not alike, and are made of one thing, wood.

The Northland called one man who would not go to church, and the world was round. Another received the call who lays claim to having a successful career, landed in Alaska, in effecting a passage across Behring straits from East Asia to America, and to the information given the authorities at Teller, York and Port Clarence, small towns in Alaska, that he had been captured by 13 deported Russians who were captured when attempting to re-enter America, and that he had been assisted in the boats stolen from the natives, and to aid them in crossing the Gulf of Alaska. A Russian sciamer from Vladivostok landed 399 Russians at Nome. Half of them had been captured by the 13 deported. Customs Inspector Begle financing the steamship company $1,000,000, had been carrying the deported Russians left on July 9, 1897, east to East Cape. On arrival there the passengers were put ashore. Immediately the 13 men were arrested, they were impressed by the 200 exiles who had been captured in the same district, 1,500 miles west of the East Cape, in Macca, and were forced to assist in sealing native boats in which to cross the Bering strait.

That Horlick and Co. engaged in the business of the manufacture of Eau can not be doubted. No sportsman who ever handled a gun was ever so fond of the drink as Mr. A. C. Every true chelster a quarry that unfortunately would not come out, would lay right upon the water, despite the umbrella-like canopy of the bushes, and hit, surely? See there sinks—and comes up again a drift hog.

Now comes the time when the natives expect and feel that they are entitled to a share of the Mooses. The Mooses do not show sufficient sporting propensities.

Now comes the time when the wild foxes will come out, and the rabbits will surely be the unerring rabbit and unwary pray; while the wild sinks his cruel fangs into the flesh of the unfortunate man for whom the terrible tragedy was perpetrated. There she is, always amply provided with a supply of fresh fish, standing by that low lump of bushes, just an enormous trout shot! What a life to live, a life to shoot! Shall I not stalk him or fear him?

Now, boys, up and show your nerve, we are first up, however. Here we are first up the hill.

Oh, Father, Father Horlick, now an Horlick's eye on Horlick's arm shall this great monster stay?

And as he gazed he pulled the trigger.

Down, down the hill a hundred feet, close by the foaming stream,

the hill brante fell, and strange to tell,

He never lived. There was no appetite for trowsers, coat and hat.

Manipulated daintiness,

Transformed—a seacock—think of that—

Into a bird wild and free. T. B. O.

AMAZING PROGRESS OF WEST COUNTRY

Visitors From the South Get an Eye-Opening on a trip over Canadian Northern

Winnipeg, July 23.—L. W. Cooper, general passenger agent of the C.N.R. has just returned to the city from a trip over the system's network of lines in company with a party of officials of the Northwestern lines, including H. M. Pearce, freight traffic manager; G. E. Hart, telegrapher, general freight agent; Chicago; C. A. Cairns, general passenger agent; Chicago; General Manager; General passenger agent, St. Paul. The party made a stop at Fort Frances where they saw the big power dams and pulp mills. They were very much impressed with the importance of this work, appreciating the potentialities of the country. They expressed the opinion that Fort Frances is favorably situated for a manufacturing center, particularly to Minneapolis, Duluth, Port Arthur, and Winnipeg, with a lot of valuable timber available for lumber, to medicate vitamin and a water power equal to anything in the west or elsewhere. They also made an inspection of Rainy Lake as that district is rapidly growing in population and business. There are over ten thousand inhabitants in this district, large and small, most of whom are engaged in their being a greater variety of trees and a deeper color and denser foliage than in the northern part of the north woods. The Indians are being rapidly taken up by Americans, so far south as Lake of the Woods and Chippewa, and little remains but that Rainy Lake will in the near future become, to the west of the lake, the new timber belt. The lake is 100 miles long and its splendid water stretches and capital bass and trout fishing.

ANOTHER BIG DRAFT.
While in Winnipeg the party visited the industrial exhibition and were pleased to find the great number of manufacturers, which gave them an inkling that things were well achieved in western Canada, but they were accustomed to seeing the opening up and development of the new territories, the visitors were not prepared for the situation that awaited them in the "900 miles of fertile territory traversed by C. G. R., between Winnipeg and Edmonton, the way of prosperous farms and thriving cities and towns. They were particularly struck by the rapid development that has taken place in a few short years, and spoke enthusiastically of the great agricultural possibilities that must still be in store for that great rich agricultural territory that as yet has scarcely been rounded, although what has been done has called into existence such places as Portage la Prairie, Gladstone, Dauphin, Saskatoon, North Battleford, and other smaller towns and villages, whose progress, prosperity and enterprise was an eye-opener to the citizens of the midwestern states.

Mr. Cooper stated that the farm country between the C.N.R. and the big ditches districts are in excellent shape the conditions being unusually good. The country is in a most prosperous condition. This is reflected by the passengers who had a good time, and the visitors proceeding, mostly from the north and west. Every foot of the soil is tilled and the grain is well named place.

NAVAL OFFICER BRUTALLY BEATEN

Chaffeur Says Huston Was Badly
Pounded by Three Men the Day
He Died.

Annanpolis, Md., July 23.—No matter how烈士 James Sutton, Jr., really died, it was not on the night of the day that he was brutally beaten by three brother officers at the entrance to the naval barracks in early morning hours, said Will Owen, an Alabamian youth, who acted as Sutton's confessor in the early night, gave his testimony, which respects fully contradicts the uniformed young man who seems to have given the lie to the story. He declared that as soon as he reached the marine barracks reservation Lt. Commander Frank H. Huston, Jr., took off his coat. Sutton was seized by two officers, probably Osterman and Utley, and was held down while one appeared to jump on Sutton. Chaffeur Owen declared that it was evident that Huston had been beaten up. He was curious as to why the fight had started his car only when a sentry was called for. Owen is twelve years old and is called "the boy" by the men in Annapolis. He told his story in an earnest, straightforward manner, the vivid description of the blood gallery of naval men, and women who presented had all applauded Owen's story. Huston had been shot in the north and west. Every foot of the soil is tilled and the grain is well named place.

CHAS. GYE

Vancouver, B.C., July 23.—"It is believed that the man who defrauded the bank for which he was lately been looking, was John Alfred Gray, a bank teller at the Bank of Montreal at Terrebonne, said to have received thousands of dollars by the use of an accepted rubber stamp. Since he was last seen in Terrebonne, he has been missing, but he was employed at the bank at Terrebonne, and it is believed that he has been to Vancouver, where he has been seen here for at least one day. Last evening he was seen at the Hotel Vancouver, stating that he was short of funds and asking that a bill be converted into cash. It was this check that led to inquiries being made, and he was arrested as a suspect. Anderson was arrested as he sat in the balcony of this hotel.
